Contents: Cooper-Hewitt museum in New York City: a turn-of-the-century mansion built by Andrew Carnegie, recycled into the Smithsonian Institution's national museum of design. Cincinnati union terminal: a maimed and abandoned landmark that could be maintained, inhabited and successfully re-used as a school for the arts. Madison civic center: a new art gallery and auditorium which grew from a former movie theater and a department store—woven together by new construcseventy-year-old building to today's standards.

1894 grand opera house and hotel in Galveston: an exercise in interpretation. It is wrong to preserve old buildings academically and scientifically as yesterday's stage sets for today's
